

Kyralian Astrology; A Primer

quilled by Libras D'lnar

Many lie tired at the end of the day and stare up into the sky. Resting there always are stars; tiny glints of light that dot the blackness of night. It has been proven that these seemingly insignificant things can aid travelers in finding directions when lost or finding distances between locations. Others believe they can also foretell future events or acquire knowledge unknown to them by studying the stars. I will discuss a method I have made for the latter, in that this knowledge may aid all people in their lives.

This information will be based on the view of the winter sky, as this was present when I recorded the following information. Constellations are referenced from Ghiyun Paynauro's publishing, Star Charts.

Constellations

Stag: North of The Gateway, this constellation represents natural order and wildlife. Strong stars toward the antlers of Stag indicate a disturbance in the ecosystem of an area while weak stars indicate rest and balance. When Stag is strong in the sky, watch for nature trying to rebalance its own. A weak Stag indicates a soothing calm and that the people are due for one if one is not already taking place.

ex: After fighting of a grove of vampires, a weak Stag is in the sky as adventurers are greeted at the tavern by the smell of freshly baked pastries.

Viper: North of Harp, Viper is an indication of slyness and subterfuge. Strong stars toward the tongue indicate this happening among communication while ones toward the tail indicate actions with these qualities. A strong Viper shows that you should always check twice and something and consider things before taking action. A weak Viper shows that being more trusting of individuals is necessary and questioning may provoke offense.

ex: A strong Viper-tail lights the sky as several rogues, scouts, and adepts plan a heist.

The Aberration: South-southwest of Harp, The Aberration shows things that should not be. Strong stars in this constellation indicate the coming of non-natural things such as undead and non-native elemental beings. Weak stars mean that native denizens may be more relevant such as kobolds, goblins, and ogres.

ex: The Aberration is ablaze with light as a necromancer and his legion of undead assault the own.

The Stray Arrow: South-southwest of The Aberration, The Stray Arrow shows error in one's ways and possibly the unintentional harming of another. Stronger stars toward the head of The Stray Arrow indicate the severity of the harm done. When The Stray Arrow is strong, a ruckus may start from something unintentional. When weak, The Stray Arrow indicates a lack of falter among everyone.

ex: A clumsy scholar causes much friendly fire during a Storm when The Stray Arrow is apparent.

The Boundary: North-northeast of The Great Cup, The Boundary represents personal comfort whether on a social or aesthetic level. Strong stars indicate people being less comfortable while weak ones show that people may be opening up.

ex: A group of Barbarians claim the adventurer's land as their own with The Boundary strongly gleaming.

WINTER STARS

